

Painted Dog Conservation is a non-profit making organisation in Zimbabwe, whose mission is to create an environment where painted dogs can survive. Initiatives include employing and educating members of local communities, supporting anti-poaching efforts, rehabilitation and monitoring wild dog packs.

<https://www.painteddog.org/>

The Botswana Predator Conservation Trust aims to promote the sustainability of threatened and endangered carnivore species and their habitats in Botswana through education, applied conservation research and effective management.

<https://www.bpctrust.org/>

African Wildlife Conservation Fund

The Africa Wildlife Conservation Fund works to maintain healthy and viable populations of African wild dogs and other large carnivores in Zimbabwe, as well as the habitats and prey species on which they depend. This is achieved through a combination of research, conservation and education.

<https://africanwildlifeconservationfund.org>

Children in the Wilderness is a non-profit organisation supported by ecotourism company Wilderness Safaris, which aims to facilitate sustainable conservation through leadership development and education of children in Africa.

<https://www.childreninthewilderness.com/>

The Waterberg Wild Dog Initiative (WWDI) is a community-driven, non-profit organization that strives to conserve the free-roaming African wild dog population that inhabits the Waterberg in Limpopo province, South Africa. Working alongside the community, WWDI focuses on education and raising awareness about the dogs. They also monitor and collect data on the population and implement projects to mitigate the many threats facing the dogs as they traverse vast areas of land, much of which is not “formally protected.” Read about their important work and how you can support them as they explore and promote the ecotourism potential of African wild dogs in the Waterberg.

[Home | Waterberg Wild Dog Initiative
\(waterbergwilddogs.org.za\)](http://waterbergwilddogs.org.za)